The Globe and Mail reports in its Thursday edition that Redwood Diversified Equity Fund portfolio manager Michael Decter says buy Altius Minerals. The Globe's Maureen Darrigo writes in the BNN Market Call column that Mr. Decter says he is bullish on the Canadian equity market and attributes this to "the Asian economies driving strength in commodity markets." The stock climbed eight cents Wednesday to close on the Toronto Stock Exchange at $15.35. The stock has a one-year trading range of $15.83 to $5.75. Mr. Decter says he is "betting on the Altius Minerals management team's ability to create value and find a deal in the resource rich area of Newfoundland Labrador." Thornmark Alpha Fund portfolio manager Daniel Bain said Altius Minerals was one of his favourite stocks in The Globe on June 1 when it was trading at $12.90. Mr. Bain noted that over the past 10 years Altius Minerals evolved from a minerals exploration firm into a holding company and a venture sponsor. He said the company holds equity and royalty interests in a number of public companies' properties including a 0.3-per-cent net smelter royalty in CVRD Inco's Voisey Bay project, and a 37-per-cent in the Newfoundland and Labrador Refining Corp.
